The Turtle and the Box of Riches

Long ago there was a young fisherman's helper sitting on a dock. As he waited for his boat to head out for the day, he heard a group of children laughing under the dock. He peeked down and saw them teasing and pushing a small turtle.

"Leave that turtle alone!" the boy shouted and jumped down.

The children quickly ran away. The boy picked up the turtle.

"Thank you," the turtle said.

The boy jumped. "You can talk?"

"Yes," the turtle said. "I am a very powerful turtle in my land. Your act was an inspiration. I want to reward you for your kindness. Go to sleep tonight, and when you wake up, you will be in a wonderful place."

The turtle swam out to sea. The boy went to bed that night in disbelief. Yet, the next morning he woke up in a beautiful palace.

"Welcome to our home under the sea," the turtle greeted him.

The turtle took the boy through the underwater palace. Large windows showed many types of fish and plant life. Gold walls and mirrored ceilings shined brightly. The boy met all of the friendly turtles that lived in the palace. Later that day, they had a big feast, and the boy ate more than he had ever eaten before.

As night came the boy asked to return to his home.

"Thank you so much for all you have shown and given me," he said. "I have a lot of admiration for your home, but I must return to my home before morning. I have to work on a fishing boat and cannot afford to miss a day's pay."

"I understand," the turtle said calmly. "Take a rest after your big meal, my friend. When you wake up, you will be back in your bed. But before you go, take this box."

The turtle handed the boy a box with two drawers. Then he gave him a key. He told him to open the box at home.

"Take this key," he said.

"Use it to open one of the drawers—either one—but do not ever open the other. You must promise."

The boy promised and fell asleep on some pillows. When he woke up, he was in his bedroom. There was the box sitting next to him. He took the key and opened the top drawer. It was filled with gold and jewels! The boy was rich and knew he wouldn't have to work again.

The box had one key and two drawers.

The boy was filled with appreciation but could not help but wonder about the second drawer. What if he had opened it first? Might he have found even greater riches? He opened the drawer but it was empty. Quickly he opened the first drawer again. The gold and jewels had turned to dust. Instead of a rich man he was just a fisherman's helper once more.

A. Reread the passage and answer the questions.

Possible responses provided.

1. What do the first seven lines of the passage tell you about how the narrator thinks about the fisherman's helper?

The narrator thinks that the fisherman's helper is a good person, who gets involved and helps when he sees someone in trouble.

2. Do you think the narrator approves of what the fisherman's helper does? Use text evidence to support your answer.

Yes; in paragraph 6, the turtle talks about the fisherman's helper's act as an inspiration and as kindness that should be rewarded.

3. What is the narrator's point of view about the fisherman's helper at the end of the passage? Does the narrator still think the same as at the beginning of the passage?

The narrator still believes the boy is a good person, but understands that the boy made a mistake by not taking the turtle's advice and opening the second drawer.

Kyoto Frog and Osaka Frog

Two frogs lived in Japan. One frog was from Kyoto. The other was from Osaka. Each frog set out to see the other's town. They met halfway between Osaka and Kyoto. Both were very tired. Neither knew if he could go on. Then Osaka Frog had an idea.

"We should help each other stand on our hind legs. That way we can look out at the towns we want to visit. Then we'll know if we really want to keep walking," Osaka Frog said. Each frog faced the town he wished to see. Then each pushed the other up on his hind legs. But when they did this, their underbellies faced the town they wanted to go to and their eyes faced back home.

"Kyoto looks just like Osaka!" said Osaka Frog.

"And Osaka looks just like Kyoto!" said Kyoto Frog.

Each decided to go home rather than travel to a town that looked exactly like home. So each went home, not knowing that Kyoto and Osaka were as different as two cities could be.

Answer the questions about the text.

1. How do you know this is a folktale?

It has a problem that the characters have to solve; it has a lesson.
